Rob Bland of Accouitre in Scott's Addition

TOOLS OF THE TRADE

All the products Rob Bland carries in Accouitre, 170 Altamont Ave., have a definitive purpose in the world of cooking. “Everything I bring in is thoughtful and intentional,” says Bland, who has a background in food service, hospitality and cooking. “I sell highly functional tools for the kitchen and dining areas of the home.”

Bland opened the Scott’s Addition shop in 2017 after a long history in cooking. He trained around the world in Spain, France and New Zealand and worked mostly in Raleigh, North Carolina, as an executive chef. He later managed a restaurant group in Raleigh. “I also was a design nerd and I like retail,” he says, explaining why he decided to open his store. “I wanted to create a store where I would want to shop. In Richmond that store didn’t exist, so I made it.”

The shop’s minimalistic Scandinavian and Japanese-influenced interior design features oak tables, white walls and neutral wood tones. The modern, contemporary ambiance is akin to the atmosphere in an art gallery. “It’s pleasing, comfortable and beautiful,” Bland says. The products sold at Accouitre all share a similar aesthetic.

The shop carries essentials and non-essentials for cooking such as ceramics, French press coffee makers and spice cellars. “I carry quality goods, items that will be with you the rest of your life,” Bland says. “They all have a high level of craftsmanship.”

His product line is heavy on knives because “that’s where it all starts,” he says.

He buys his knives from countries such as Japan and Sweden. He also carries knives from Charlottesville- and Raleigh-based Horn & Heel, makers of hand-forged knives. “They are incredibly beautiful, highly functioning and incredibly intuitive,” Bland says. “The metal work is insane. The owner of the company is in touch with the culinary scene. He knows how to make a knife that feels and looks good.”

When it comes to tools and objects that you will be handling everyday, “You need a physical connection,” Bland says. “That’s why I wanted to open this store in Richmond. I want to serve my neighbors, my community and my friends.” —Joan Tupponce

TIMELESS DESIGNS

Clarity, balance and beauty are the main pillars at Wilson Lee Interiors & Boutique. The combination of all three is obvious in the selections and decor featured in the company's boutique and showroom.

“We offer interior design, project management and an array of products that enhance people's lives,” says owner and interior designer Angela Wilson Lee.

Wilson Lee is thoughtful about the merchandise she carries in her boutique. She looks for items that will last a lifetime. “If people need it for their home or lifestyle, we have it here,” she says.

The large, open space holds a wide assortment of household and lifestyle items, everything from furniture and decorative accessories to giftware and tower. The soft green color palette provides a soothing backdrop for the boutique's selection of chandeliers, from metal and ribbon to shimmering crystal.

Furniture — sofas, accent chairs and dining-room tables and chairs from manufacturers such as Emerson Bentley's Bentley Churchill collection, Norwalk Furniture and Lexington Home Brands — ranges from transitional to traditional to modern.

Lamps and home accessories, such as vases and tabletop items from Vietri, mingle with hand-selected gifts that include colorful gemstone and high-end metal jewelry.

Wilson Lee started her company 24 years ago in Atlanta but moved the business to Richmond 10 years ago. She continues to take on design projects around the country, with clients in Miami, New York, Northern Virginia and Washington, D.C., as well as Virginia Beach, Wilmington, North Carolina, and still has a large clientele in Atlanta.

She’s happy with her move to Richmond, she adds. "Like living in Richmond the best. I’m so happy when I get off of a plane and come back home." —JT

METAL ARTISTRY

Nildo Bonfim has rendered his ideas in three dimensions for as long as he can remember. As a young boy growing up in the city of Goiânia in Goiás, Brazil, he often drew his creations in 3-D to show his friends. When he was 12, he apprenticed to a metal fabricator, where he discovered a natural affinity for the material and was inspired to create. “Most of the projects there were simple gates and fences,” Bonfim says, through an interpreter. “I saw the potential of the material and thought things would be more beautiful with curves.”

After working for three other companies in Goiânia — learning more about his chosen medium with each job — Bonfim opened his own metal shop, where his original designs for local shopping malls attracted the attention of the architectural community. Soon he found himself working for businesses across Brazil. When the Brazilian economy collapsed 20 years later, he made his way to the United States to try his luck in Miami. He joined the staff of an established shop where the projects were more elaborate and grander in scale — like the gate he designed for actor Sylvester Stallone’s Miami home — than those he’d done in Brazil, and the owners were open to his designs. He stayed for eight years, during which he taught his sons the trade.

Bonfim’s move to Ashland was pure serendipity. He and his wife came to visit friends and discovered that they liked the Richmond area, particularly the change of seasons. He extended his stay to explore the market further and took a job with a local metal fabricator to learn more about doing business in the region. Four years later, in July 2013, he founded Virginia Metal Art Work.

Today the master craftsman still loves the challenge of designing, handcrafting and finishing bespoke pieces for his clients. He is known for the high-end, detailed designs that he fabricates and forges in his Ashland workshop. He creates railings, staircases, gates, door grills, entry doors, fences, sculpture, miniatures and furniture — bed frames, chairs, tables, cabinets and more. Bonfim’s artistry and more than 40 years of experience set him apart from his competitors. “In Brazil, people ordered more basic things,” he says. “Here my clients ask for something beautiful, no matter the cost.” —SUSAN MORGAN

DEEPLY ROOTED

Flowers and family are two constants in Madison Landa Williams’s life. Williams, co-owner of Boulevard Flower Gardens, grew up in the family business founded by her grandmother, Maybelle Land, in 1953 when she began selling flats of pansies cut out of her house on the Boulevard in Colonial Heights.

“She was an outdoorsy type of woman,” Williams says, noting the company moved to South Chesterfield after 50 years on the Boulevard. “She had a good knowledge of agriculture. It was a passion of hers.”

Boulevard Flower Gardens stocks everything from annuals and perennials to trees and shrubs. It’s packed with hanging baskets chock full of mixed annuals, everything from petunias to million bells. Boston ferns and specialty begonias such as Dragon Wing and Angel Wing fill in any empty spaces. “You are fully immersed in flowers,” Williams says. Most of the annuals, vegetables and perennials sold by Boulevard are grown in-house.

Inside the shop you’ll find racks of wind chimes and bird feeders, as well as a Florist and a large selection of products for water gardening, from different varieties of Koi and goldfish to tadpoles and plants. The store also carries bulk mulch.

One of Boulevard’s biggest attractions is its annual October pumpkin patch. “We’ve been doing that for 25 to 30 years,” Williams says.

Her family is involved in all aspects of the business. She and her mother, Francine Landa, work behind-the-scenes on the business side. Her father, Mark Landa, is head grower and her sister, Casey Landa, is the “face and voice of the business on the floor and behind the register,” Williams says.

As far as trends, she sees people buying more herbs and edibles (vegetables, small fruits) for their gardens instead of decorative annuals.

“It’s a more practical approach to gardening,” she says, noting container gardening is great for people with small patios. “It’s rewarding to have a harvest.”

Madison also sees a resurging interest in houseplants. “We often teach classes and workshops about how to detoxify your house and also design trends in the house,” she says. “Snake plant, spider plants and pothos are all good detoxifiers.” —JT

SO, YOU WANT TO BUILD A TREEHOUSE...
Do it — but keep all this in mind:

ONLINE RESEARCH
There are a number of online resources for treehouse building. Watch all the YouTube videos you can find. DVR old episodes of Animal Planet’s “Treehouse Masters.” Become obsessed. Then purchase architectural plans for the one you want to build — but don’t be afraid to modify.

TREE HEALTH IS PARAMOUNT
Once you’ve chosen your site, whether in one tree or multiple trees, get an arborist to give those trees a clean bill of health. Just as crucial: Get him or her to identify and remove “widowmakers,” dead branches that could fall on you during the build.

TOOLS ARE HALF THE BATTLE
This is true of every construction project; it’s especially true in a treehouse build. A drill, strange bits, a giant wrench, foot-long screws and monster bolts are just some of the things I had to buy for my project. Luckily, a friend had all the regular tools you’ll also need: Table saw, miter saw, circular saw, screw gun, router and more.

“Build it, and who knows what your treehouse will become?”

CASTLES IN THE AIR
How are you going to get massive pieces of lumber in the air? The easiest way is to rent scaffolding. Even so, you’ll need help from at least one other person to hoist giant beams into place.

KEEP IN MIND
Your tree/trees are still growing and alive. Make sure you leave room for your treehouse to grow with them.

DON’T BE SURPRISED IF THE USE CHANGES
I never thought I’d record a podcast in my treehouse. Carrie Rogers didn’t envision an Airbnb business for hers. Preston Kendig said his family spends more time on the deck than inside the actual treehouse, and the Goliaths said the neighborhood kids use the treehouse as much as their own kids do. Build it, and who knows what your treehouse will become?
ARE YOU READY FOR HURRICANE SEASON?

There have been several major hurricanes over the past seasons which can bring more on the way. Hurricane season draws out those pesky insects in addition to the searing rays of the Sun.

We proudly serve all of Virginia, The Eastern Shore, and North-Eastern North Carolina. Our Alutech products provide protection from Break-Ins, Bugs and Inclement Weather as well as UV and Heat from the Sun. Almost any opening or enclosure can be protected, from Windows and Doors to Kiosks and Pharmacy Counters.
